Local Bikeway System Under Consideration

By PATRICIA REID
Of The News Staff

National statistics show that 10.6 million bikes have been purchased this year compared to 8.5 million cars. The 10-speed bike boom has swept the country and is taking in every city and age group. Bookstores now carry a wide selection of bicycle books and "do-it-yourself" repair manuals.

With environmental reformers encouraging return to bikes -- and with increased objections being raised about automobile pollution, it looks like the cycling craze is more than a mere passing fad.

With San Bernardino leading the way, every other city in the county is feeling pressure to follow in step and get urban and interurban bike trails. It may not be too far in the future when 10-speeds are accepted as legitimate vehicle transportation for commuters.

Serious cyclists are determined to keep on pedaling and they're writing letters to city officials and putting the pressure on to insure that bicycling is "counted in" all future planning.

A bike trail system is in the works in Ontario. Trails are to extend along West Cucamonga Creek from the north city limits to the point in south Ontario south of Philadelphia Street where West Cucamonga Creek merges with Cucamonga Creek.

IS THERE A PUSH BY THE STATE -- FEDERAL GOVERNMENT TO ULTIMATELY REPLACE THE CAR WITH THE BIKE?

Some time ago the state legislature commissioned a study regarding the possible establishment of bicycle pathways throughout the state, linking municipalities and communities and encouraging them to develop internal bikeways for recreation and for transportation between home and business, shopping, school or church.

Throughout this year San Bernardino County Parks and Recreation workers have been attempting to form bicycle trails throughout the county to tie together regional parks, Louis Perna, of the planning division for County Parks and Recreation Department, said members of the county bikeways coordinating committee have already met twice to lay out possible bike routes which will connect all the West End communities and form an extensive network of bikeways from Yucaipa to Chino (128 miles long).

Perna recently sent a workbook on "Proposed County of San Bernardino Bikeways" to each of the 14 members of the bikeways coordinating committee.

tee. He explained that each community must study and examine its own bicycling needs and problems and formulate its own routes and determine its own funding.

The county Regional Parks Department suggests that bikeways, while providing a means for connecting two points, should provide stops and access to parks, museums, lookout points and other sites of historical, cultural or aesthetic value.

The proposed bikeway program suggests that bikeways be segregated from vehicular traffic whenever possible. It's best for cities to use flood control and utility rights of way, municipal service roads and abandoned railroad rights of way bought by communities.

As yet the county hasn't planned equestrian or motorbike trails. The Horse Riders Association of Alta Loma is working with the county in an attempt to tie in equestrian paths with biketrails.

Perna set Aug. 15 as the deadline for communities to present a map showing suggested bikeway routes through their communities. A major meeting will be held at the County Parks and Recreation Dept. on Sept. 27 at which time a revised county bikeways map will be drawn up which will join the regional parks from Yucaipa to Chino and connect the bikeways of the different communities in one extensive network. The master plan will then be brought before the County Board of Supervisors for approval.

Katherine Bridge, chairman of Alta Loma's Park and Recreation Committee, said her committee has suggested the following possible routes: Baseline Rd., 16th St. to tie into Etiwanda and Upland; "Rialto Reach" flood control channel on the north side into Chaffey College; Cucamonga Wash flood control channel for bike-equestrian trails. Alta Loma also proposed a bike trail for Turner Ave.-Hermosa Ave. It also proposed using the Deer Creek flood control channel to tie into the proposed Cucamonga-Guasti Regional Park, North-South streets of Carnelian and Sapphire were suggested.

Fred Taunton, director of Upland's Recreation Department, said that Upland's proposals include: Tying into Ontario at the West Cucamonga Channel; using Cucamonga Channel which would tie into the West Cucamonga Channel south of the Edison Padua substation; San Antonio Wash channel which would be a joint effort with cities in Los Angeles County and a city-wide bikeway system which would connect city streets and parks.

Taunton said the Recreation department had sent a bikeways survey out to 100 Upland licensed bike owners last January and 49 returned it.

Council Wants To Keep Tax Rate Status Quo

Upland City Council adopted a resolution Monday night to retain the present property tax rate for fiscal year '72-73. The total amount to be raised for taxation was set at $704,011.

Councilman Harold A. Bailin suggested amending the resolution to reduce the amount of money necessary for the general city funds to $656,000 -- the amount determined as necessary at the conclusion of the city council budget session. The amendment received no second. The council voted 4-1 to set the tax rate at $704,011. "The $48,000 surplus will be designated for development of the Civic Center project," stated Councilman George M. Gibson.

The council also gave final approval on the second reading of the controversial ordinance to change the zoning on Mountain Avenue, (on the east side, north of 13th Street), from R-3-3600 (multiple dwellings) to R-1-C (single family).

The vote was 3-2 with Bailin and Councilman A.M. Hawkins dissenting just as it was at the last council meeting on August 7.

The Planning Commission opposed the rezoning of Mountain Ave. for a second time after re-reviewing the case. The council vote to refer the entire Mountain Avenue zoning issue to the newly formed Mayor's Advisory Committee for study at the August 7 meeting.

At that time Mayor Abner B. Haldeman said he had always hoped that the pressure on the zoning of Mountain Avenue would lessen and the problem be solved. He said he felt that the make-up of the Advisory Committee made it possible to find a solution to the problem.

Council members unanimously approved the ordinance to Upland's Municipal Code to increase the fee builders are required to pay into the "City Water Acquisition and Expansion" fund on the first reading.

Administrative Assistant Lee Travers presented facts to point out that the fee hike for builders is necessary due to increased costs of water stock since the code was last amended.

The vote was 4-1 (with Hawkins dissenting) on the second reading of amendments to the municipal code establishing minimum floor area requirements in residential zoning districts.

Hawkins disapproved of the second section of the ordinance which calls for establishing a requirement that the Architectural Commission review development projects of 2 or more single family dwelling units in single family residential zones.

Except for Bailin, who objected to the probable costs of the plans, the Council approved a request from the Mayor's Advisory Committee to purchase a set of architectural plans for the Administration Building and the Council Chambers for the proposed Civic Center.

In a letter, Robert Sherwood, Chairman of the Advisory Committee, said it would be impossible for the committee to give the council reasonable, factual answers on their first assignment (the Civic Center Project), without architectural plans.

Following the suggestion of the Mayor's Advisory Committee, Hawkins moved to begin proceedings to acquire needed property for the Civic Center project.

Summer Reading Program At Upland Public Library Ended

Summer reading games at the Children's Department of Upland Public Library ended yesterday. Ms. Phyllis Frost, children's librarian, said the number of readers entering the reading games and receiving certificates was down quite significantly from last summer.

Ms. Frost attributes the lower participation to the fact that more children are involved in summer school than in previous years and also because the programs weren't publicized enough through the elementary schools before school was out in June.

Approximately 150 children from first through sixth grade earned reading certificates for reading at least 10 books this summer. Also, some 70 preschoolers and first graders, belonged to the "Read-to-Me" Club and had at least 10 books read to them.

"Lick Pollution" was the theme of the summer reading games. After registering, each reader was given a form on which to keep a record of his reading. After reading three books, a chart showing a very polluted landscape was started. Each time a child read a book he received a colored slip of paper which he affixed to the polluted scene. By the time he read 10 books he had a clean landscape, showing fish, animals, flowers etcetra in their natural state.

A completed chart entitled each reader to a reading certificate his name placed on the "Magic" Tree -- in the form of a bird or butterfly -- and an invitation to party next Wednesday August 30 at the Upland Elementary School auditorium at 10:00 a.m.

Preschoolers (non-readers) stamped a monkey on their "Curious George" monkey chart each time a book was read to them. After completing the chart (10 books), they got to place a caterpillar with their name on it on a Monkey Tree and were invited to a puppet show party to be held in the multipurpose room of the library next Tuesday morning at 10:00 a.m.

In addition to Scottish dancing by Laurel McPhearson of Upland High, the program Wednesday will include two films about pollution. "We're hoping this summer's reading program and the films will have lasting effects on the readers and that they'll be looking for ways to eradicate pollution," said Ms. Frost.

There will also be a drawing of children's names who will plant a tree donated by Upland Library at Upland Elementary School following the program.

Ms. Frost said the 1970 summer reading program called "Read with Charlotte" was by far the most active with 1,185 entrants and a total of 598 children receiving reading certificates. Last summer 629 entered a total of 448 got certificates.

Every Tuesday and Wednesday morning at 10:00 a.m. there will be a story hour for preschoolers at Upland Library beginning September 12. Primary story hour is at 4:00 p.m. every Thursday beginning September 14.

PAUL ANDREWS

He's Back Home Here 'Tying Up Loose Ends'

Upland resident, Paul Andrews, 24, is home for a few weeks from the Baptist Theological Seminary in Denver, Colo., visiting his family and "tying up loose ends" before he takes off again for additional graduate study at the University of Saint Andrews in Scotland on Sept. 16. Andrews is distinguished as the first Upland resident to win a post-graduate Rotary Foundation international scholarship in the greater Pomona Valley Rotary District. Fifty students (one from each Rotary district) are awarded international scholarships in the United States every year.

Andrews applied for the international scholarship and flew to Montclair from Denver for personal interviews in May of '71. Rotary International confirmed the scholarship in September of '71 and he began applying to colleges abroad. Out of five European universities he listed, Andrews got his number 3 choice. He explained that Rotary International tries to have the winners go to as many different universities in Europe as possible.

Son of Rev. Bernard E. Andrews of the Foothill Baptist Church, Paul was attending Seattle Pacific College in Seattle, Washington when his family moved to Upland.

A philosophy major in college, he's working towards his Master of Divinity degree from the Denver seminary. He would like to teach philosophy at the college level if he doesn't go into the full time ministry.

Andrews spent this summer as an intern-pastor for an Orthodox Methodist Church in a predominantly black community in the Park Hill District of Denver.

Upland Man Heads New Cal Poly Program

Dr. John B. O'Hara of Upland, and California State Polytechnic University, Pomona dean of continuing education, has been assigned the added responsibility and title of the university's educational services program.

Until this time, O'Hara, as dean of continuing education, has been responsible for all public and private education programs coordinated through Kellogg West, Cal Poly's multi-million center for continuing education.

As dean of continuing education and educational services, O'Hara retains his responsibility for the Kellogg West program and assumes the responsibility for the university's two summer sessions and growing, year-round extension program.

"In two years the extension program has grown from 15 courses to more than 50 offered each quarter on and off campus. As a self-sustaining evening program, extension enables working taxpayers to utilize the services of the university which they support. As part of Kellogg West, the extension program will continue to grow, offering classes and workshops which fulfill the needs of nearby community members," O'Hara said.

Prior to coming to Cal Poly, Pomona in 1969, O'Hara was manager of international and industrial education for the Philco-Ford Corporation, Fort Washington, Pa. His experience includes positions as consultant for the Fourth Army, director of the University of Oklahoma (UO) Human Relations Center, director of the UO Center for Leadership Training, speech instructorship at Middle Tennessee State College, and graduate assistantship in speech at UO.

Listed in the 1969 edition of Who's Who in Education, O'Hara produced two 12-week series of television programs on Dynamics of Leadership for the Oklahoma Education Television Authority.

He worked in El Salvador as a trainer for Peace Corps members and participated in a study exchange program to the Republic of South Africa.

'Action' Predicted At County Fair

"Junior Action -- '72" at the Los Angeles County Fair is just that--action. Live demonstrations, question and answer sessions, involvement by the general public, and free samples will highlight the new junior exhibit, opening Wednesday, Sept. 20, at the 45th presentation of the exposition in Pomona.

Junior Action, to be put on with the help of local 4-H clubs, Future Farmer of America chapters, and college students, will include such diverse topics as milking goats, baking muffins, tree climbing, chemical shearing, and handling snakes.

The program will start Sept. 20 and will be open weekdays from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m., and on weekends from 12 p.m. to 9 p.m. in Building #5 on the Pomona fairgrounds.

Exhibits open with Dairy Goat Night. Milking and feeding demonstrations and displays on goat breeds, tattoos, and management will highlight the opening night.

Thursday, Sept. 21, will be Dairy Cattle Night. Information on artificial insemination, breeds, milking, judging, and the care and feeding of cattle will be imparted during the night's program.

Floral Night will be Friday, Sept. 22. Corsage making and flower arranging will be taught to interested fair-goers, with many of the corsages to be later given away free to audience members.

Baking muffins and making ice cream and butter are but a few of the demonstrations to take place during Nutrition and Cooking Day on Saturday, Sept. 23. Many goodies will be passed out during the demonstrations.

Local 4-H clubs from four counties will put on a fashion show during the afternoon on Sunday, Sept. 24, while rabbits will take over the same night, with rabbit showmanship, breeds, pelts, and management practices the main topics of the evening.

Tips on how to buy meats and cut up meat properly will be given on Meats Night, Monday, Sept. 25.

Tuesday, Sept. 26, Junior Action will put on a Forestry Program. Tree climbing, core samples, and planting seeds are just a few of the valuable pieces of information that can be gained this night. In addition, freetrees and free tree seeds will be given away to interested fair-goers.

Sheep and Wool Night will take place Wednesday, Sept. 27, with breeds, types, showing, clipping and chemical shearing demonstrations and exhibits to be on hand.

Fitting and showing, artificial insemination, management, and breeding will be just a few of the topics discussed during Beef Night on Thursday, Sept. 28.

Horses will have their own night on Friday, Sept. 29, when shoeing, trimming, judging, and feeding and care of horses will be the topic of discussion and demonstration on Horse Night.

Dog Day and Dog Night is slated for Saturday, Sept. 30. Dog obedience, showmanship, and a guide dog program are on tap.

A Reptile Show on Sunday, Oct. 1, will round out the Junior Action program. Freeze dried rattlesnakes, boas, pythons, lizards, alligators, amphibians, and turtles will be on display. Visitors will be given the opportunity to handle some of the creatures. Awards will also be handed out to winners in the reptile contest.

The "Junior Action -- '72" program is just one of many free attractions awaiting some one and one-quarter million visitors expected to attend the festivities during the huge exposition's Sept. 15 through Oct. 1 run.

Swimmer Howard Hyde, a member of the Upland Aquatic A.A.U. Swim Club, distinguished himself last weekend by taking first place in the 11-12 age group's 50 meter free swim competition at the Southern California Junior Olympic Trials held in Lakewood.

The Junior Olympic Trials will continue this weekend for the older age group and will wind up a busy spring swimming season for swim club members.

This weekend 14 swim club members will be competing in the older age group. Swim Club Coach Jesse Staples is confident that Nancy Campbell (15-17) whose been winning meets all season, will qualify in the meet and will make an impressive showing this weekend. She will compete in the 100 and 200 meter butterfly and the 100 meter freestyle events.

Coach Staples has been coaching the swim club in its eight years of existence. The A.A.U.

program (Amateur Athletic Union) was added to the novice program only 2 1/2 years ago. Staples said there are some 92 novice swimmers and 27 A.A.U. swimmers in the club.

He explained that the A.A.U. program enables swimmers to go "further than their own backyards" and to compete in numerous swim meets with other communities. According to Staples, Upland has the smallest A.A.U. team in the area.

The Upland Aquatic Club is a community club and open to any swimmer or diver interested. Staples calls the club a "training program for the Olympics." Members swim 11 months out of the year--the AAU swimmers work out 5-6 times a week while the novice swimmers work out 2-3 times a week.

On August 10, the novice group won first place in the league championship meet held at the Alta Loma High School pool. Staples said the novice swimmers have been league champions for five straight years.

At present, swim club members have been using Upland High School pool to work out in the evenings and John Brewart, owner of the Arabian Nights Health Club has allowed them to swim from 6-8:30 a.m. mornings in the Arabian Nights pool. "Program have been really cut because of a lack of facilities," complained Staples. "We're regretting the reputation of being one of the best small swimming teams and yet our swimmers are being held up because we can't get adequate facilities."

He said the most teams swim mornings and evenings 6 days a week while Upland Aquatics are restricted to 2 evenings a week. Upland's swim club swims 7-8 thousand meters a day in comparison to 12 thousand meters a day that most teams swim.

The swim club is one of a few existing clubs which is a private organization although it represents the city of Upland at meets. Staples said the Chaffey Union School District allows the club to use UH pool facilities and to pay a user fee has paid a small portion of coaching fees. Currently parents of the team members must pay $20.00 for a 10 week season for coaching fees.

Staples said the city of El Monte pays coaching fees for its swim team and swimmers pay a minimal fee for equipment repair. He said several parents have met with Upland city officials to try and get city support for the swim club.

Staples says the club is definitely in need of facilities and that coaching fees will continue to in-

He said team members hold different money raising projects throughout the year for warmup outfits and needed equipment. In late October a "Swim-A-thon" is being planned in which team members will ask for donations to match every lap they swim.

Water Dist. Oks Sewers

The Chino Basin Municipal Water District approved the regional sewers program for waste water treatment and reclamation in West End communities Tuesday morning following a brief public hearing with no protests.

The action governed the formation of Improvement District C. The hearing was continued from last Wednesday in order to allow all interested persons to speak.

At the meeting last week, Earl Olsen of Upland asked for a continuation in order to obtain additional information regarding the regional proposal involving CB-MWD, the cities of Montclair, Chino, Ontario, Upland and Fontana and the Cucamonga County Water District.

At the latter meeting Olsen reported that he had talked with numerous persons in the field of sewer treatment. He told the CB-MWD directors that their work was "laudatory and commendable." He said he was now convinced that the regional proposal was "the most economical and efficient."

Ray W. Ferguson, vice president of the board, reported that he and Andrew Schlange, general manager of the water district, had met with Lewis Aukerman and others of the San Bernardino County Farm Bureau and that the questions were thorough concerning the effect upon agricultural lists from a regional program.

"I'm going to assume that they're happy now," said Ferguson. "I'm sure if they were not satisfied, they would be here this morning to protest."

The resolution adopted by the CB-MWD board excluded the water district area which has been incorporated into the City of Rialto, which is served by the San Bernardino Valley Municipal Water District.

This action was taken upon the recommendation of Wilfred David Langer, consulting engineer for the district. The resolution included the Prado Dam area owned by the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers.

The formation of Improvement District C is effective in 31 days, according to Eugene Nazarek, attorney for the district.

With 45-50 million American women—nearly half the women in the country—now sewing creatively, this means that 1 out of every 3 women's and children's garments is made at home. Back-to-school wear gives a substantial boost to an already booming $3 billion to $4 billion home sewing market.

Back-To-Schoolers Romp In Mom's Home-Sewn Outfits

Simplicity Him/Her jumpsuit

There's more than one way to fill a back-to-schooler's closet. And mothers who try the make-it-yourself method this season will find plenty of easy-care fabrics and provocative patterns to help them.

At McCall's Patterns, the fashion director, Ms. B. Clerk, notes that more mothers are taking up needle and thread to outfit their youngsters for school. She says they often follow the "T-shirt principle."

A T-shirt has simple lines, is easy to put on, and even easier to care for. The new children's patterns follow the same theory.

"Simple lines fit a child's life-style. Stuffy layers of ruffles and bobbles are not practical attire for an active school schedule," Ms. Clerk explained.

She also emphasized the importance of designing clothes that children can slip in and out of without mommy's help. A drawstring that ties into a perky bow at the neck of a dress is just one convenient replacement for back zippers and rows of buttons not within the grasp of small hands.

And speaking of mommy, wash'n wear fabrics promise a record fashion attendance. For as September approaches, drippy swimsuits and summer-league baseball uniforms give way to a wardrobe of crisp plaids, cotton velours, and wrinkle-resistant polyester.

The increasing amount of practical fabrics inspire an array of imaginative designs.

"Make-it-tonight-knits," a set of easy McCall's patterns, rely on knit fabrics (cotton, stretchable, and double-knit) to provide the shaping. Pants outfits have elasticized waistbands, pullover tops, and machine stitched hems and collars. No time-consuming handwork is required.

Try an Italian-designed pants and pullover duo with puffed pockets -- easier to sew than it is to say! Pattern 3278, a "Make it tonight . . ." is accented with puffed sleeves and pocketlike pouches suitable for stashing lunch money.

And if sewing for one is not enough, a new idea coming up in November McCall's pattern book presents three-foot-high Betsy McCall, a giant rag doll sporting an elegant head of yarn hair. Betsy wears a size 4 smock dress. Both doll and dress can be stitched according to pattern 3397. A matching smock, meanwhile, will be available for pre-schoolers (pattern 3070) in October.

Karen Lister, Simplicity Pattern designer, recommends the unisex jumper (Simplicity Pattern 9584) for the kindergarten crowd. Two yards of crayon colored double-knit is suggested for the him/her outfit.

And if "Simon Says" take three giant steps, it can be done with ease in a two-way stretch bodysuit made from the same knit (Simplicity Pattern 5105). Bodysuits are great as toppers teamed with pants and jumpers. Their neat, tucked-in-place fit even survives a morning recess of "skin the cat."

Dresses play the smock game, are kissing cousins to shirts, and often have a Highland fling. Simplicity 5226 can be made into a cotton plaid overblouse in the fall and reused as a pattern for a wool plaid smock dress with matching tights to battle the winter winds.

Wallpaper printed chintz in mellow shades of green, blue, and pink are dazzling for dress-ups, as are the new fantasy prints copied from the pages of Beatrix Potter and Lewis Carroll.

McCall's pattern 3402 can be sewn up in a mother-daughter-sister act. This empire-shaped classic is carried even in mommy's size -- ideal for Christmas card photos when made from velveteen and eyelet trimming.

Accessories range from belts of taffeta ribbon mounted on felt to carry-alls that convert into aprons. Iron-on transfers are the latest innovations in trims. McCall's pattern 3272 contains sheets of simply sketched animal friends. A dress yoke can be animated with a row of waddling ducks or dabbed with a panda bear on the pocket.

And to keep back-to-schoolers busy until the doors open in September, let them start collecting old swatches of fabric and favorite picture to decoupage a lunch box.

FEMALE ROLE

Shift In Youth View

A new youth poll shows that a majority of young American women don't believe a woman's place is in the home.

The survey also showed that they may have significant differences of opinion with young men about what a woman's role should be. The survey of some 2,500 young people -- half of them men, half women, ages 14 to 25 -- showed that 51 percent of the women disagreed with the traditional notion of women's place and only 41 percent of the men disagreed.

The female view represents a significant increase since the same question was asked in 1970 by the same pollsters. Gilbert Youth Research Inc., for the Institute of Life Insurance, then 42 percent of the women and 39 percent of the men disagreed.

Dr. Hal Edrich, director of the institute's research division, said he felt this follow-up study, which won't be published until fall, was probably the first statistical measure of the influence of the women's movement among young women.

He stressed however, that it was significant that 49 percent of the young women still believed in the more traditional role, and most still believed in marriage.

The young people were randomly selected from 108 high schools, colleges, and neighborhoods. Dr. Edrich emphasized the fact that men had no significant changes in life-style preferences from 1970 to 1972 but that women differed in many ways.

For example, in 1970, when the women were asked which of five life-styles they preferred, 42 percent chose the average housewife and 26 percent chose the life of the successful executive or professional. In 1972 the comparable figures are 35 and 31 percent. There was also a slight increase in the number of women who wanted to work toward solving social problems -- from seven to 11 percent in 1972.

The women sounded a different note, however, when asked to state which life-style they thought would best describe them in another 15 years: 53 percent said they would be average housewives, raising children. "It shows even young people realize their limitations of what they can accomplish," said Dr. Edrich.

When confronted with the model of the traditional family -- man works, wife stays at home rearing two to three children -- 63 percent of the women and 47 percent of the men rejected this concept.

Some rejected this idea because they planned to have fewer or more children, but the majority said they rejected it because the woman would be working. "This could cause some interesting conflicts in human relationships," observed Dr. Edrich.

Engagement Announced

The Rev. and Ms. K. Rusdahl of Upland announce the engagement of their daughter, Priscilla, to Howard Adams of Montclair.

Ms. Rusdahl is a senior at the University of Idaho, Moscow, Idaho. She is majoring in home economics education and hopes to enter graduate school in December.

Mr. Adams is the son of Mr. and Ms. H. Adams of Montclair. He is a senior at the University of Idaho, majoring in accounting. He is a Montclair High School graduate and attended Chaffey College.

A summer or fall wedding is planned in 1973.

Strings And Things -- What-Have-You Shop

Ms. Ruth Aylor bought Strings & Things on Second Avenue in Upland around the first of the year. "The store has been in business since about 1971," said Ms. Aylor's daughter, Ms. Melanie Shelby. "Ruth Ann Berry owned it before my mom bought it. She and mom are friends. She told us she wanted to get out of the business and wanted to know if we were interested. We were."

Strings & Things is a yarn-macrame-weaving, "what-have-you" shop that is just artsy-craftsy enough to appeal to the young, and well stocked enough to appeal to older persons.

"I was an art major in college," Ms. Shelby said. "I guess I've gone all out here in the store. I've tried to make it as eye-catching as possible. You'll notice all the bright colors and the way everything is arranged. Some yarn shops just throw their goods in the middle of the room and let people paw over them. I've tried to bring a little order out of chaos and do it tastefully."

Ms. Shelby said she and her mother got interested in the business after taking a macrame class. "Also my mom's a very good seamstress," Ms. Shelby said. "She's been interested in this type of thing most of her life. She hired me to work here because she felt the shop needed a young person." Besides, she quipped, "she felt I could give it that special artistic touch."

Ms. Shelby said the store carried "just about anything a yarn store possibly could. We have beads and buckles for accessory use. We even carry wool for hooked rugs. And we have needle point patterns and materials. Of course, there are macrame materials."

Chive, And Pinwheel Dinner Treat

FEEDS EIGHT -- Here's proof that a pound and a half of ground beef can feed eight handsomely with the addition of selected pantry items.

"What shall I have for dinner with company coming unexpectedly?" How many of us have been faced with this dilemma. Here's how to s-t-r-e-t-c-h a pound and a half of ground beef to feed eight.

Tap the emergency pantry shelf for biscuit mix, condensed cream of mushroom soup and the freezer for frozen chopped chives. Add chives to brighten the commercial flavor of those packaged foods. Tender biscuit dough rolled to 1/2 inch thickness, spread with a cooked ground beef and chive mixture and rolled like a jelly roll.

Baked to crusty brownness, cut into thick hearty slices served with creamy smooth mushroom and chive sauce. Add a crunch salad, a cooked vegetable and a hot fruit crisp to complete a meal given a good start with the flavor of chives.

Frozen chopped chives—one of those really no-work products. A small tub packed with the bright color and fresh flavor of chives captured by proper freezing and shipping. Inexpensive considering the wealth of flavor in such a small container. As has been said -- good things always come in small packages.

Chive And Beef Pinwheel
1-1/2 pounds ground lean chuck or round
1 egg
1 teaspoon crumbled poultry seasoning
1/4 cup chili sauce
1/4 cup frozen chopped chives
4 cups biscuit mix
1-1/3 cups milk

celery salt. Stir until dough is formed. Knead on a lightly floured board until smooth. Roll out into an oblong 18 x 12 inches. Spread meat mixture over dough. Roll up starting at the 18 inch side into a jelly roll. Place in a greased shallow baking pan.
Bake in a preheated moderate

1/2 teaspoon celery salt
1 can (10-1/2 ounces) condensed cream of mushroom soup
1/3 cup milk
Cook ground chuck in a skillet until just brown and crumbly. Drain excess fat. Stir in egg, poultry seasoning, chili sauce, 2 tablespoons of the chives. Cool. Combine biscuit mix, milk and oven (375 F.) for 25 to 30 minutes or until richly browned. Combine cream of mushroom soup, milk and remaining chives. Cook until bubbly. Cut meat roll into 1 inch slices. Serve 2 slices to each person and spoon sauce over slices. Add a crisp salad, a vegetable and the meal is ready. Serves 8.

Gay Nineties Picnic's A Winner

An old-fashioned Sunday outing with a picnic lunch, homemade ice cream and straw hats sounds like a page out of any Gay Nineties scrapbook.

But it's the favorite party idea of a very "today" young girl, Lydia Anne Hodson of Lexington, Ky.

The party idea won Lydia a $2,500 college scholarship and first place in the 1972 America's Junior Miss Hostess Awards. Here are two of the winning recipes:

Potluck Potato Salad
1/3 cup French dressing
6 cooked medium potatoes, peeled, cubed
1 1/4 cups chopped celery
1/3 cup chopped onion
5 hard-cooked eggs, chopped

1 cup mayonnaise
Cherry tomatoes for garnish (optional)
Pour dressing over warm potatoes; chill 2 hours. Add remaining ingredients, mixing lightly. Chill. Garnish with cherry tomatoes. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Old-Time Custard Ice Cream
1 1/2 cups sugar
1/4 cup flour

1/2 teaspoon salt
1 quart milk
4 eggs, beaten
1 quart heavy cream
3 tablespoons vanilla extract
Toppings of butterscotch, chocolate fudge, caramel or walnut
Combine sugar, flour, and salt. Gradually stir in milk. Cook over low heat, stirring until thickened. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Serve A Sea-Feast: Shrimp On A Skewer

Butter Barbecued Shrimp
1/2 cup (1 stick) butter
1/2 cup chopped green onion
1/2 cup catsup
1/2 cup water
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
2 teaspoons grated lemon peel
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
1 tablespoon sugar
2 teaspoons dry mustard

1 pound uncooked shrimp, peeled deveined and thawed
Hot rice
In 1-quart saucepan melt butter; stir in onion, catsup, water, Worcestershire sauce, lemon peel, lemon juice, sugar and mustard. Simmer 5 minutes. Thread shrimp on skewers. Place shrimp in a shallow dish. Pour marinade over shrimp.

Speed Temps, Climb Here

Johnny Rutherford, who qualified for the front row in the inaugural "California 500" and for the second row last year, indicated he would be a candidate for pole position this year when he scorched a one-lap average of 191.50 mph late Tuesday afternoon.

He waited until air temperature of 101 and track surface high of 143 had abated before he ran.

Other top speeds were registered by Mario Andretti, 189.949; Al Unser, 188.020; and Steve Krisloff, 185.326. In all, 31 of the 51 cars certified for the race were on the oval.

The car driven by Hiss suffered damage Tuesday but is expected to be repaired in time for Saturday qualifying runs.

Two other cars absent Tuesday were the Dan Gurney entries of 200 mph candidate Bobby Unser and Indy hard-luck driver Jerry Grant, who saw his bid erased by tire problem and then saw his second finish reduced to 12th spot due to illegal refueling procedure. Grant was due on the track Wednesday with No. 48, while Unser isn't expected to appear until Thursday.

"We're ready," the maestro of the Olsonite Eagles noted. And when Dan Gurney is ready, beware.

Bronzes Added To Museum Collection

Four 12th century Indian bronze sculptures without equal in the United States have been given to the Los Angeles County Museum of Art by Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Wallis.

The bronzes are a significant addition to what is rapidly becoming one of the country's more important collections of art from India.

Known as the Rajamannar Group, the four pieces can be seen in the Ahmanson Gallery of the Museum. The group centers around Krishna, perhaps the most colorful personality in the Indian pantheon. Krishna is seen with two of his consorts and his winged mount.

Museum Director Kenneth Donahue said that the generous gift from Mr. and Mrs. Wallis has also provided the topic for the first of a new series of Museum publications, "Krishna: The Cowherd King," a 62-page monograph, inaugurates a series of art historical monographs to be published and sold by the Museum. The "Krishna" book with color and black-and-white photographs, can be purchased in the Museum Bookshop for $4.95.

"The Wallis bronzes provide an auspicious beginning to what will be an authoritative series of monographs by our curatorial staff," said Donahue. "The monographs will be published periodically and will deal with all aspects of the Museum's collection."

The Wallis bronzes are significant because of their iconographic rarity as well as their high degree of aesthetic quality, according to Dr. Pratapaditya Pal, Curator of Indian and Islamic Art and author of the "Krishna" book. The four Chola bronzes not only represent one of the highest points of Indian art but there are no comparable examples of such a complete grouping in the United States, according to Dr. Pal. The Museum acquired a major collection of Indian art in 1969, but it did not contain any significant examples of Chola bronzes.

The Cholas were one of three major dynasties that ruled much of southern India between the 9th and 13th centuries. Under their patronage artists produced some of the greatest bronze sculpture in Indian history. It was in the 12th century, a key period in the development of Indian religions, that these four bronze figures were created.

Krishna, the major figure in the group, has been described as an inspired teacher, crafty politician, generous prince, dauntless hero, passionate lover and compassionate savior. Krishna may actually have been a local hero who was eventually deified. Legend says that he lived with a group of cowherds for a time in order to hide from his demonic enemies. He later became known as the Cowherd King.

The four figures in the group were cast individually. They range in size from 19-1/4" to 34-1/4" with Krishna dominating the group. "Large images such as these were usually placed in temples rather than domestic shrines. These bronzes probably once served as processional images in an important Vaishnava temple," said Dr. Pal.

Indian religions repeatedly stress that in the final analysis the Absolute is without shape or form. The impracticality of expecting ordinary people to appreciate such an abstract concept has resulted in a wide variety of forms in Indian art suggesting the infinite possibilities of the Absolute, explained Dr. Pal. Indian artists have not hesitated to combine human images with apparent unrealistic qualities.

The "Krishna" book includes an appendix by Johnson that is the most extensive technical report ever published on Indian bronzes. Casting and joining techniques as well as chemical content were analyzed. Johnson's examination revealed that the detailed ornamentations on the figure metal after they had been cast and that the two female figures weigh the same although they are of different heights. Johnson explains that this "astounding" knowledge of alloys seven centuries ago was used to maintain the religious requirements that the figures have certain height and weight relationships.

Wallis has been a member of the Museum's Board of Trustees for several years and is best known for his motion pictures that have been seen by millions of people throughout the world. His wife, the former Martha Hyer, has also been in the entertainment world as an actress. They live in West Los Angeles and are active supporters of the Museum.

"They have long shared an interest in European and American art," said Donahue. "Through their generosity, these four magnificent bronze figures will be able to contribute to the understanding of Indian culture here for as many centuries as they were venerated in India."

The bronze figures are located in the Plaza level gallery devoted to Indian

THE ARTS

Viewing The Changing California Landscape

Arthur Millier has made a significant contribution to the art growth in California as both artist and critic for the past fifty years. Alfred Frankenstein, well known San Francisco art critic, writes of this contribution in a new catalog of Mr. Millier's work: "If modern art is flourishing on the Pacific Coast today Arthur Millier is one of the people responsible. We are all very much in his debt."

Mr. Millier was recently honored with a retrospective showing of 125 etchings and watercolors at the Los Angeles Municipal Art Gallery in Barnsdall Park. The show covered work executed from 1918 to 1972. It included a series of wash drawings done in the trenches of France during World War I. Not only was the showing a pictorial resume of an artist's progress, but it was also a retrospective of the changing California landscape: from San Francisco, down through the beautiful Santa Ynez Valley to Los Angeles and more southerly areas like Palm Springs.

Born in Somersetshire, England, Millier moved with his family to California while still a boy and later received formal art training at the California School of Fine Art in San Francisco.

His first pen and ink sketches were done at the Old Plaza in downtown Los Angeles, a picturesque and historical spot he has frequently used as subject matter for his etchings.

After serving overseas in the Canadian Army, 1916-1918, Millier made his first etchings in San Francisco in 1920 while earning his living as a ferryboatman and gas lamp lighter. But his career was always divided between his enthusiasm for art and writing, and for some years the writing predominated although he constantly worked to perfect his etching techniques.

His writing is chiefly associated with the Los Angeles Times where he worked as art critic until 1958. In 1954 he received the Frank Jewett Mather Award for best newspaper art criticism in cities of over 500,000 in the United States and Canada.

Millier was represented in the collections of many museums including the Dallas Museum; the Philadelphia Museum of Art; the Art Institute of Chicago; the California Palace of the Legion of Honor, San Francisco; the Pasadena Art Museum, and the Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

"PLAZA CHURCH," LOS ANGELES, 1922: Etching by Arthur Millier

Film Shown On Bombing

A film on the bombing of Hiroshima and seminar participants from the World Friendship Center will be featured tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the Community Council for Peace, Claremont Presbyterian Church, 1111 N. Mountain St., Claremont.

The 30-minute documentary film, titled "Hiroshima," consists primarily of footage shot by Japanese cameramen shortly after the bombing.

BOMBS AWAY? GUESS AGAIN -- Turn the page upside down, and the bombs turn into a couple of rockets trailing smoke and flame. Or are they waterbugs leaving a wake on the placid surface of a woodland pool? The photographer simply told the editor: "Guess."

Movement Is Artist's Theme

The ethnic dance collection will be displayed in Los Angeles at the Century City Mall Art Show, August 24-28. The show also will feature a live demonstration of his technique by the Palm Springs artist.

As a young art student required to devote hours to the study of human anatomy, Arms became intrigued by changes brought about by movement of the body, due to its complex muscular structure. Expressing this change as an artist became the challenge of his career and resulted first in a series of "living sculptures." Using thin gold wire as his medium, Arms sculpted multiple images of a single human body so that it appeared to be in a different position from any given angle.

Although the unique sculptures brought Arms his first acclaim as an artist, they were only the prelude to his attempts to capture the same feeling of movement on canvas. Using the same multiple-image technique, and concentrating primarily on dancers as subjects, Arms succeeded in capturing the feeling of movement he wanted.

The current collection of ethnic dances is an outgrowth of this long study of the geometry of motion. Multiple images are not used, but the paintings convey a distinct feeling of movement.

"This is what I have been aiming for all along," Arms said at his Palm Springs studio. "The new works represent an evolutionary step."

GREENERY SETS THE STAGE

Potted Plants And Terrariums Going Back To College

Living plants will be part of the gear that college students, both men and women, haul back to their campus living quarters this year. It's all part of the ecology wave, but students have also discovered not only that growing things transform a dull dorm room, but that it is fun to cultivate one's own green thumb.

A couple of university shoppers seen selecting plants in Bullock's Wilshire's new first-floor greenery emporium, said, "Plants are very important to us. We love them."

Seventeen magazine, which visits a variety of colleges all over the country each year to find out what students are doing to their rooms, says, "The current fascination with ecology and in everything natural and organic means that almost every student wants plants."

They are booming business at dime stores, plant shops, nurseries and flower shops.

At the greenhouse annex of Cost Plus in San Francisco, students and young marrieds are going through checkout lines with bushels of house plants popping out of their baskets.

One student showed an antique sugar bowl (which she bought for 50 cents minus its lid) soon destined to hold a flourishing philodendron in her room.

Finding interesting containers -- from antiques and old pottery, to woven baskets -- is part of the current adventure of hunting through junk shops, flea markets and handcraft fairs. Even a plant grown from an avocado seed deserves an attractive setting. And hanging arrangements are great favorites in many dorms and small apartments.

For those without much skill in bringing nature indoors, terrarium kits are available that take the guesswork out of indoor growing. At the David L. Swartz showroom in the Los Angeles home furnishings mart, were dozens of terrarium kits by Christen of St. Louis, shaped like flying saucers, balls, domes and mushrooms, and retailing for $7.98 to $59.98 depending on sizes and bases.

Each terrarium comes with glass container, special potting soil, rocks, charcoal and instruction booklet for assembling your very own self-contained miniature garden. This showroom already has sold 20,000 terrariums in the Los Angeles area alone and sees the future "alive" with possibilities.

At the San Francisco market, a new company called Terra Systems is showing such terrarium

"environmental accessories" as cubes to sit on your desk and terrarium end tables and coffee tables, all very lush with plantings planned by a horticultural expert.

Kits are even available for inserting plant material down the narrow neck of glass water jugs -- a pastime only somewhat less tricky than building a ship in a bottle.

If you prefer not to bother with a kit, you can buy an already-planted terrarium at most florist shops at prices ranging from $7 to $75. These have the advantage of being professionally planted and established,

You choose the type of planting you prefer -- desert, woodland or tropical.

One terrarium, planted with tropical flora, contained baby's tears as low ground cover, Neanthe Bella palm, ruffled Boston ferns, a podocarpus, a pickaback and a tiny bromeliad, with moss covering the soil to help retain water.

Instructions for planting, watering and feeding with liquid plant food, should always be followed carefully.

People bent on do-it-yourself terrariums are using every kind of glass container, from cannisters to bulbous brandy snifters or old fish bowls in which to build their "indoor ecological systems."

Besides plants -- and rock, mineral and bottle collections -- the items that will go back to school this fall are big, bold decorative sheets, cardboard furniture, and bean bag chairs.

"Sheets," says Seventeen, "are this year's answer to all kinds of school decorating problems."

The wilder they are, and the more supergraphic in scale, the more the kids love them. Vera's designs for Burlington, Scuda and Bill Blass for Springmaid are a few of the favorites with students.

As for the cardboard furniture, it is the small chests, the tuckaway storage boxes that slide under beds, and round tables that are most in demand. The "draped table" look that Bates has encouraged with its numerous round wash-and-dry table fashions, is made possible with a $5 (postpaid) 72-inch round table of corrugated paper-board, which holds up to 50 pounds in weight, and is available by mail from Bates Fabrics Inc., Dept. FP 2, P.O. box 576, Middtown Station, New York, N.Y., 10018.

The craze is still on for old trunks that do triple duty in dorm rooms -- as storage, seating, and table space.

Pomona Valley Literally

In Pursuit Of J. D. Salinger

"I keep picturing all these kids playing some game in this big field of rye and all. Thousands of little kids, and nobody's around--nobody big, I mean, except me. And I'm standing on the edge of some crazy cliff. What I have to do, I have to catch everybody if they start to go over the cliff--I mean if they're running and they don't know where they're going I have to come out from somewhere and catch them. That's all I'd do all day. I'd just be the catcher in the rye and all."

--J. D. Salinger
Catcher In The Rye

Pomona Valley book stores are under siege; it seems that everyone is searching for J. D. Salinger, creator of the best-seller, Catcher In The Rye.

Why? Because Salinger is nostalgic, a glimpse into Eden and innocence, a journey through the fifties, Jim Dean and blue suede in toll. The author of Catcher In The Rye is 53 now, living the hermit's life in Cornish, N.H., alone since his divorce in 1967 from his English-born, Radcliffe-bred wife of 12 years. He refuses to talk with reporters, students, tourists, curiosity seekers. After Hollywood in 1949 ruined Uncle Wiggly in Connecticut, he has refused to sell the film rights to any of his other stories, including Catcher In The Rye. While Catcher was a Book of the Month selection, not one of his other books--Franny and Zooey, Seymour: An Introduction--has been released to the merchants of cut-rate culture.

Even Salinger's famous mailbox, immortalized by Time and Newsweek, has disappeared--too many letters from real and imagined scholars and artists. Beyond that Salinger can sometimes be found in Hanover buying books or using the library at Dartmouth; he likes buttered popcorn when viewing an occasional flick and he's been on a retainer from The New Yorker since 1948. As might be suspected he's a very doting father to his two children and he hasn't been in print since 1965.

His last two stories--Hopworth 16/1924, and Seymour: An Introduction--deal with Seymour, and are clearly Salinger's attempt to raise him to the level of mystic-saint. They are also the most unsuccessful of the lot. Hopworth 16/1924 is a letter from seven-year-old Seymour to his family. To be mercifully brief about it there never was a kid who could write like that. The combination of psychological insight and religious and sexual awareness are more the property of the 46-year-old author than the seven-year-old narrator.

Seymour: An Introduction presents an incredibly self-conscious and painful narrator (Buddy--Salinger's alter ego) in pursuit of his allusive religio-mystical brother. For a man who professes to ignore his critics, Salinger is all too aware of them in this story. So much for second-rate stories. The rest are a delight to any reader-lover of the Glass family and the others who sparkle in the mud of the fifties.

Salinger is the writer of the fifties. Caught up in a world of New Yorkers and camels' hair coats, he tried to find an attractive set of human values which are salvation or at least a way of "maintaining" in today's world. All his characters are hung up on a Brooks Brothers' rack of love-hate toward the great world, aware of their extraordinary sensitivity and in deadly terror of their egos. (Only Seymour escapes by the seat of his baggy pants.) Or as Zooey puts it: "Cleverness was my permanent affliction, my wooden leg." The Glasses want to live in the world but find it full of "tiny, meaningless, sad-making" people. The stories present with painful accuracy the terrible transition between adolescence and maturity.

Salinger's characters grow up absurd but try to turn their absurdity into art. Seymour is a poet, Buddy writes fiction; Franny and Zooey act and Holden is Holden, spinning art into life.

They are also entertainers, like Les and Bessie, and artists ordering a true world but constantly fighting the real one. But there's more to it than that; the final Salinger drive is a religious one. The great virtue is detachment of a special kind. It is a detachment from the self, not the world. A reaching out for other people: the Fat Lady of Seymour's parable, Holden's ducks in Central Park, Buddy's clumsy narration in "Seymour." It is ironic that Salinger the recluse should write fiction that is so predominantly social. For he is nothing so much as a world lover, but one who knows the secret dark places too--yet who would be God's entertainer. And who once convinced a date that he was the goalie for the Montreal Canadiens. And Seymour Glass committed suicide.

It's a phony world and Salinger knows it. And so does we. But it's the only one we've got and although none of us made it and few will "Make it," there is an unshakable truth in Holden Caulfield's version:

"What did Mr. Thurmer say to you boy? I understand you had quite a little chat."
"Yes, we did. We really did. I was in his office for about two hours, I guess."
"What'd he say to you?"
"Oh . . . well, about Life being a game and all. And how you should play it according to the rules. He was pretty nice about it. I mean he didn't hit the ceiling or anything. He just kept telling about Life being a game and all. You know."

"Life is a game, boy. Life is a game that one plays according to the rules."

"Yes sir. I know it is. I know it."

Some game. If you get on the side where all the hot-shots are, then it's a game. But if you get on the other side, where there aren't any hot-shots, then what kind of a game is it?

Sometimes you wonder if Holden Caulfield knew Richard Nixon and, come to think of it, he probably did. There's more to it than just prep school or Ivy League. It's one of the pillars of American society. It's getting a good job, or even a job. D. B. and Hollywood, graduate school, college ("one more dopey insane place in the world dedicated to piling up treasures on earth") and certainly New Yorker ads. Salinger himself is the product of this world: prep school (but not college), Upper East Side New York money. The son of Sol, importer of Polish ham and cheese. Stopping briefly in Warsaw he returned eventually by way of Zen seeking the Great Good Place in the East.

The search for innocence of childhood is as much a part of Salinger the American as Salinger the mystic. He's looking for the frontier as much as Keasey or Brautigan. But instead of drugs it's religious transcendence. The New Yorker can publish him and help him because he's a novelist and not a revolutionary. The threat to an Establishment from this kind of man is minimal. So Salinger writes New Yorker lovingly ironic prose and turns off activists of all shades. He takes the money and runs to New Hampshire where he's free to conduct his long distance love affair with New York without being ground up in the PR and publicity which has done in so many American writers. You won't see him on the Dick Cavett Show. New Hampshire will leave him alone to pursue and/or exorcise his demons and speak with his angels. Is it really necessary to know what movies he likes, how many times he brushes his teeth, or how much of Seymour-Buddy Glass is J. D. Salinger? Cornish is no paradise, but who ever lived in the Golden Age?

After a long tirade a formal feeling comes. With apologies to another recluse, we need more from Salinger. Sure we've all changed since the first time we read Catcher. But beyond the hype hip aspects of a counter-culture isn't there an impulse much like that of Salinger's fiction? An effort to clear out the waste in this society, and some of this waste might just come in the form of counter-catalogues and Levis. It's the egotists in ourselves that we have to exorcise first. Because, like the stars of It's A Wise Child, we may be "superior savants." Salinger cut through the facade of material smugness that was the fifties but cast a jaundiced eye on the Beats. You can change one uniform for another.

One of the curiosities about Salinger's fiction has been his attitude toward sex. He tends to exclude it; love for him seems most often to take nonsexual forms. While this is perhaps just an adjunct to his idea about detachment, it seems puzzling and prudish. The Glasses, for instance, seem to operate within the closed and charmed circle of the family, and the two characters who represent physical love (Muriel, Seymour's wife, and Lane Coutell, Franny's Ivy League lover) are insensitive and destructive. Maybe for him freeing yourself from desire means the abandonment of sexual love too. While that's too much for most of us, we have to at least accept the possibility that it's good for him.

The works, like Laughing Man, "strike terror and admiration in mediocre hearts" and in the hearts of some of the rest of us too. Salinger got stopped up by the religious impulse--the wish to create contemporary saints--and his good intentions just didn't come off. J. D. may have been to the mountain-top but he didn't come back with the goods. He lost the stone tablets on the way down and someone slipped in bromides instead. Seymour's mystical visions and precocious pronouncements don't make it. Maybe it's as simple as Seymour says it is, but most of us have a tough time accepting the world as a conspiracy by people to make us happy ("Raise High the Roofbeam, Carpenters"). The hassles of the lesser Glasses are closer to the grime and sweat of our lives.

Salinger is fascinated by kids; he knows how they talk and live. The Glasses and most of his "good" characters have a child-like air about them. They have preserved, beneath the surface cynicism and the awareness of decay, a sense of wonder, Salinger's love affair with New York is more than the provincialism of a native. It is the real sense of wonder at and an attraction to the uniqueness of each day. The child is the father of the man in spite of phoniness, greed, and assorted kinds of betrayal. He retains his faith in goodness, assaulted as it may be by the evils of banality that pull down so many and finally destroy the child in each of us.

Perhaps Salinger is too "precious" a writer for our times. Perhaps he's rotting in the ferment of a quivering sensibility. Perhaps too he's found the detachment that Seymour, his ideal (who else would you cast for the part?) possesses. But his mystical visions have found no convincing portrayal in his fiction, whatever personal value they might have. The real value for us lies in Salinger's picture of the struggle for a good life (as opposed to the good life). Maybe we've all changed too much—no body cares much for Ivy League suits or Westport. But it's still a hassle to make a decent life walking that tightrope between ego and them. Salinger could and did portray our naivete, nobility, absurdity and pain. Perhaps in that blockhouse studio of his he's got something for those of us who don't see visions, who live on the plain and not on the mountain. We need something more than nostalgia; not a nice man, but a real catcher in the rye.

EVERY DOLLAR YOU SAVE IS A BOOST TO THE ECONOMY.

Some people would have you believe that saving money is a disservice to the economy of this country. Nothing could be further from the truth.

Your money is loaned out to build new homes and churches and shopping centers, and low-cost multiple dwellings.

And that means jobs. Jobs for carpenters, bricklayers, plumbers, road-builders, painters and a host of other occupations. Jobs for the people who cut the timber, make the bricks, manufacture the plumbing materials and paint.

The list is endless. It goes on and on. Your savings working to build the economy while they are building for your future.

It has been estimated that every dollar provided by a Savings and Loan creates four dollars of new economic activity. As a result, the $38 billion we loaned in mortgages last year generated $152 billion in the economy.

Valley Taxpayers Will Benefit

Pomona Valley's taxpayers and the welfare population will both derive benefits from a substantial reform in the welfare system going into effect this month under recent amendments to the Social Security Act.

Under these amendments most applicants for Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) and family members aged over 16 are required to register at an HRD office for work or training as a condition of eligibility for benefits.

This requirement will insure that HRD has direct access to the entire AFDC employable caseload by requiring that new recipients register for employment in an HRD office, prior to receipt of benefits.

The new procedure is expected to add some 116,000 welfare recipients to the approximately 83,000 recipients now registered with HRD in California.

Employment service and rural manpower service offices of HRD, working jointly with County Welfare Departments (CWD) are now registering and assessing the employability of these welfare applicants.

For the adult welfare population, the new approach strengthens their opportunity for meaningful work by giving them a better chance to get a job directly or to receive training and have access to the social services that will allow him or her to get and keep that job.

The massive sign-up is actually an extension of the existing California employables Programs under which employable recipients are now referred to HRD in some counties to receive job-related services from employment experts and social service staff under HRD supervision.

The new registration requirements also support California's WIN program by speeding referrals and giving added emphasis on employment as a goal.

Previously, the only registration requirement under California law was for unemployed fathers and children over 16 not at school.

HRD Director Hansen stressed that "the amendments represent a significant and highly desirable step in the direction of welfare reform and we plan to administer it with all the determination we can bring to the program."

"The new emphasis," Hansen said, "is on jobs. If training is necessary it will be done as much as possible on the job instead of in the classroom."

Employers who hire certified participants can claim a first-year tax credit of 20 percent on wages paid. The employees must remain employed a second full year, although if they quit, become disabled, or are fired for cause the credit can still be claimed.

Labor market advisory councils are being established to identify jobs available or likely to become available, and training will be related to jobs identified by the council. The council will include representatives of labor, industry and public service employers.

Civilian Employment At Record High

California's civilian employment averaged 8,077,000 — an all-time high — during the first six months of 1972, a senior Reagan administration official has announced.

The official, Sigurd I. (Sig) Hansen, director of the Department of Human Resources Development, said the employment increase from the comparable period of 1971 was 166,400, or 2.1 percent.

Four industry groups (trade, government, services and finance) provided the spark for this recovery. "Even manufacturing, which at this time last year was in a decline, has rebounded sharply," Hansen said. "During the same period, unemployment has registered a substantial decrease," he added.

He said trade led the expansion with a gain of 46,000 (3.0 percent) for a total employment of 1,569,000, distributed proportionately between wholesale and retail trade.

Next largest expansion (42,700, or 2.9 percent) occurred in government, which employed 1,502,300 (an all-time high). State and local government, led by education, provided all the growth, Hansen said, as federal government employment recorded a slight (0.2 percent) decline.

Also establishing a record high employment (395,000) was the finance, insurance, and real estate group, up 15,300. This group registered the most rapid craft and electronics. Employment in transportation, communication and utilities, at 450,000, remained virtually unchanged from 1971. Trade disputes in air and water transportation, along with a small loss in communication, were causes for the lack of growth in this sector.

Unemployment, at 557,000, was 96,700 (14.8 percent) below the same period in 1971. Average unemployment fell from 7.6 percent to 6.5 percent.

growth rate, 4.0 percent, and all segments contributed to the advance, Hansen said.

Hansen also gave these other details: Employment in services grew 2.6 percent to a record high of 1,289,800, or 32,300 above the 1971 average. Leading sectors in this growth were medical and other health services.

Manufacturing, which had experienced employment losses during the first six months of 1971, showed substantial improvement for the same period of 1972, with an employment gain of 27,000 (1.9 percent) to 1,476,200.

Major factors influencing manufacturing in 1971 were the recessionary economy and large scale cutbacks in aerospace and defense. During the first half of 1972, however, the aerospace complex (electronics, aircraft, ordnance and instruments) registered a moderate recovery, with the addition of 5,600 employees, mostly in air-

State Needs More M.D.s

You may spend less time waiting to see your doctor and you may find he will have more time for house calls if a bill sitting on Governor Reagan's desk is signed into law.

The bill (SB 665, authored by Senator Song) would spend some $9,360,000 of state funds over a five year period to establish departments of family practice in medical schools and greatly expand the number of family practice residency training programs in the state. The end result would be a substantial increase in the number of medical students entering general practice.

According to Thomas L. Stern, M.D., president of the California Academy of General Practice and one of the strong supporters of SB 665, only 10 percent of today's medical students are going into general practice because there are inadequate training opportunities for this type of practice. He stated that a survey of medical students indicated that 50 percent of them would be interested in family practice if better training facilities were offered and he urged patients who have been inconvenienced by the doctor shortage to write the Governor.
